

The Greater Philadelphia Philosophy Consortium

Undergraduate Philosophy Conference 2017

presented by the Drexel University Department of English & Philosophy and College of Arts and Sciences

The Greater Philadelphia Philosophy Consortium's annual Undergraduate Philosophy Conference will be held Saturday, March 4, 2017, 9:00am to 5:00pm at Drexel University's University City campus, Philadelphia PA, 19104.

Undergraduates are invited to submit philosophical essays suitable for a fifteen to twenty minute presentation on any topic, to be followed by commentary and discussion. Papers must not exceed 2,500 words or 10 pages, double-spaced, and must be prepared for blind review. One submission per person. The top eight submissions will be read by their authors at the conference and published in Fresh Philosophy, the undergraduate philosophy blog/journal of the GPPC <http://www.freshphilosophy.com>. Reviewers will include Philosophy faculty and undergraduate Philosophy majors including the journal editors.

The deadline for submissions is Sunday, December 18, 2016. Please send your submission by email attachment as an electronic file in .doc or .rtf format to Peter Amato at peterama@drexel.edu. Notification of accepted papers will be sent by Saturday, February 4, 2017. Commentators will be needed to present brief remarks following each paper. If you are interested in being a commentator, whether or not you intend to submit a paper, let us know. For further information write to peterama@drexel.edu or check the conference website at: <http://www.pages.drexel.edu/~pa34/gppcupc2017.pdf>.
