So what does this mean? Note that the curve is ONLY applied at the end of the course. Some of you with high 60’s could be in the B- range, high 70’s could be in the A- range. But you have your other grades, a second midterm and final before this becomes meaningful.

So 80 or above: you're doing very well.
70-80: still striking range of an A, but you can also slip the other way. But a B in physics is nothing to scoff at either.
60’s: you have a C right now, but high 60’s could get lucky, so no cause to give up...plus your effort can move you over.
